Program explores Martin County's health & sustainability

"Martin County 101 – It's Different Here" is a half-day program on Jan. 20 designed for new and existing residents will explore Martin County through its history, natural and manmade environments, economy and social elements.

The curriculum, which runs from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m., looks at how the various parts of the community are interrelated. From biodiversity to biotech, waterways to wages, agriculture to the arts, subject matter experts provide information in a neutral, unbiased way to attendees.

Registration fees are $30 per person or $50 per couple before Jan 6. After Jan. 6, registrations is $40 per person and $75 per couple.
